Historic Bodmin Moor in winter finery...

A view of snow-covered Raughter and Brown Willy from Halsbury Castle near Michaelstow, taken on the morning of Christmas Day. The centre of the iron Age hillfort is said to be the remains of St Syth's chapel, seen here in the foreground, now fully exposed since the ground covering of gorse has been removed. There is a magnificent 360 degree view from this vantage point, from the fens on Bodmin Moor, the towns and villages of St Breward, Wadebridge, St Teath, Delabole and its slate quarry, to the distant coastline.

In our gardening pages 52 and 53, the plant of the month is the snowdrop (seen right) - which will soon be sprouting all over, promising us all that spring is on its way!
